Sudden Death of Gilbert Moody Yesterday

News reached the MINER yesterday afternoon that Gilbert Moody of Coryville, one of the most widely known citizens of the county, died very suddenly while visiting his sister in Coudersport yesterday morning. It is reported that apoplexy caused his death.

Gilbert Moody was born in Keating township, McKean county, Pa., November 29, 1841. He was reared in Keating and Eldred townships where he received a common school education, has always been a farmer, and occupied the old homestead. He was in the war of the rebellion, enlisting March 27, 1864 in Company D 4th United States Artillery and served three years, during which time of service he was never absent from his company over night, nor on sick report, and was honorably discharged.

Mr. Moody was married August 30, 1868, to Cynthia, daughter of C. H. and Caroline Voorhees Stull of Eldred township. This union was blessed with three children.

Mr. Moody was a leading citizen of Eldred township, and was a staunch advocate of prohibition.

Further particulars will be published in the MINER next week.

MEMORIAL FROM FRANCE

Through the kindness of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Pratt of East Smethport the MINER is furnished with the following description of the memorial presented by the government of France to commemorate the death of their son, Keith Pratt, who died in the service of the United States. The neatly framed certificate is now displayed in the window of this office. The interpretation of the symbolical group and translation of inscription follow: The group is placed on a cenotaph on which is engraved the following inscription: "To the memory of Keith Pratt, Private Medical Department of the United States of America who died for liberty during the great war, the homage of France the president of the republic.

R. POINCARE.

The principal figure of the group symbolizes the soul and spirit of the American Army which helped France to maintain alive the flame of the torch of liberty and justice.

The sword is not in the scabbard but ready at any moment to protect and defend the weak and oppressed, symbolized in the group to the left by a mother holding her baby to her breast and to insure freedom and justice to the coming generations, represented by the figure on the kneeling boy praying and thanking God for victory.

At the right the figure of a man, [illegible] the spirit of evil [illegible] the spirit of Anarchy [illegible]

IMPORTANT BUSINESS CHANGE

During the past week a transaction has been closed whereby Fred Hallstrom and Paul Hallstrom become owners of the hardware establishment in the Hamilton block through purchase from Bernard T. Garlick, who has successfully cosducted the business for a number of years.

The store was closed several days this week while inventory was taken and opened Wednesday morning under the new ownership. The MINER wishes the new firm the best of success.

Mr. Garlick who has had a severe seige of illness since last December is now regaining his former good health and as soon as he can secure a suitable office will open headquarters here for the sale of the Caloric Furnace for which he is the director for McKean county as well as for Allegany county, N. Y. This furnace is a wonderful contrivance that almost sells on sight and Mr. Garlick and his force of salesmen are already well supplied with advance orders, while two men are busy all the time installing furnaces which have been sold.

CONOPUS CLUB MEETING

A particularly interesting meeting of the Conopus Club was held at the Imperial Hotel Monday. There was a large attendance and the hour was a busy one, so busy in fact, that it was decided to hold the meeting next week at the Wright House in the evening, at which time the members can bring ladies and it is supposed that the community house project will receive considerable discussion.

Hon. H. H. Redeld, chairman of the committee on street lighting gave his report of conference with the borough council, the result of which was published in this paper last week. This matter will receive further attention at a meeting of the council next Monday night, and the committee was continued.

The permanent committee on industries is working but the proceedings of this committee will not receive publicity until there is something definite to report. This is mentioned simply to inform people that the committee is on the job.

There was considerable discussion of the street lighting problem that may later develop the solution. At present the possibility of electric lighting is receiving serious consideration, and in this connection Chairman J. C. Backus of the electric light and power committee read a letter from the International Electric Co. of Rochester, which furnishes electricity for Mt. Jewett, Kane and other towns in this part of the state. The company said that a gross revenue of $15,000 a year for a number of years would have to be in sight to warrant them going to the great expense, at this time, of running their line to Smethport, and advanced the suggestion that the matter could be handled to better advantage by the establishment of a plant by local capital. It developed during the discussion that the new chemical plants at East Smethport as well as other property owners there were interested in the electric light and power movement and the matter is to be taken up with them at once.

Attorney Guy B. Mayo won attendance prize a fountain pen, given by Dr. Burg Chadwick.

At the directors' meeting held Monday a motion to ascertain and report the cost to install [illegible] of Smethport was carried and P. L. Hoyt, and M. V. [illegible] and [illegible] county.

ARRESTED IN PORT ALLEGANY

Paul Fedick, age 33, an Austrian, who is alleged to have shot and seriously wounded Ernest Pizzini, an Olean barber, on Thursday night, is in the hands of the police after betraying himself by taking the wrong train from Port Allegany. Railroad men brought about the arrest. Fedick becoming excited when he found the train's destination Olean, crying out "Save my life."

Fedick's mysterious actions landed him in the Port Allegany jail where he was questioned by Pennsylvania Railroad Detective Leslie Coon, and confessed to the shooting. He was brought to Olean Saturday night by Police Chief John Dempsey and is now awaiting the action of District Attorney A. M. Laidlaw.

It is thought that Fedick is demented, questions bringing out a number of assertions and stories as to his past life and the more recent shooting affray. Crudely composed drawings, and diaries seem to make him out an inventor, the chief goal of his inventive "genius," of which he speaks, being a machine for perpetual motion. Many letters from the U. S. patent office at Washington and other material in the hands of the police show the man's efforts to be those of one mentally deranged.

Fedick says he came to this country 13 years ago, is not married, and had only been in Olean a short time before the affair Thursday night occured. He claims he was paid by a woman to do the shooting. Most of his inventive efforts were carried on in Gerard, Ohio, where he was employed in a steel mill. He said he came to Olean in search of a job.

Among the numerous notations in a badly worn out book belonging to the man, is the account of how he saw a vision of a woman of flame carrying a sword of flame in a wood near Gerard. He concludes his remarks by stating that this "genius," whose vision he saw, brought him success and he completed his invention a short time afterward. His stories are so wandering in their text, that the police are at a loss as to the nature of his case.

The condition of Ernest Pizzini the wounded man who is in the Higgins Memorial, is reported as [illegible]

Eight Ex-Service Men Go to State College

Eight ex-service men of the county have taken advantage of the free educational service offered by the Y. M. C. A. and on Tuesday left for State College, Pa., where they will undergo instruction in whatever branch they select for a period of four weeks, entirely without cost to them. Their names follow: Herbert McGill, Turtle Point; Arthur Schoonover, Rhienhart Johnson, Henry Rosette, Elmer Larson, Lloyd Kirkman, Port Allegany; Alfred Kleisath, Smethport; Arthur Swedenhjelm, Kane.

Ex-service men do not seem to realize the opportunities offered by the Y. M. C. A. service for demobilized men. Through it they can take a business, vocational, technical or professional course, without charge. The only qualifications demanded are an honorable discharge from the service of the United States and the ability to enter for the course desired. There are 250 courses available, covering almost every profession and trade. Shorthand, typewriting, automobile mechanics, radio telegraphy, productive orcharding, surveying, salesmanship, law, civil service, farm motors, are a few of the courses suggested. If any ex-service men who reads this article is interested he should communicate with either of the following named committeemen of Smethport: E. G. Potter, Guy McCoy P. S. Crossman.

LOCAL TEACHERS INSTITUTE

The local teachers' institute held at the high school building Saturday was well attended and of great interest. The program published in this paper last week was given in its entirety and proved to be composed of pleasing features. County Superintendent Lillibridge in a talk before the institute said that recent legislation calls for the abandonment of district schools with an enrolment of less than ten pupils. This action was brought about by the great scarcity of school teachers. The pupils of these abandoned schools will be instructed at the nearest established schools, the state looking after the transportation problem. He said that thirty-five district schools out of 92 in the county would be closed by this action.

SHEEP MEN APPLY FOR STATE CHARTER

The Sheep and Wool Growers' Association of McKean County held a banquet at the Grand Central Hotel at Smethport with forty-one sheepmen, who helped to eat "Mary's Little Lamb" in the form of lamb pot pie and roast lamb. The following appeared on the place cards at the table:

Here's to the hills of "Old McKean
The best grazing land of the whole domain,
It's up to you sheepmen here today,
To stock your land with sheep and hay.
To clothe the world and feed the nation
With the best product of all creation.

The building from which the present Imperial was evolved was originally the Rockwell House, built during the '80s by Samuel Rockwell, who conducted it for some time, later Mr. Hart and Mr. Vincent were landlords of the place and it finally became the property of Danley Bacon of DuBois, the present owner, who also conducted it for a number of years prior to leasing to Mr. Geary. The building has been vastly improved from the original structure and is now a fine building for various purposes, the suggestion most heard for an apartment house, which would help solve the housing problem in Smethport.

FEWER DEATHS REPORTED

Harrisburg, Pa., March 10. Industrial workers in McKean county suffered [illegible] deaths during February, according to a report issued today by Clifford B. Connelley, Commissioner of the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry. There were 215 fatal accidents throughout the state during the month. Ninety-six of the accidents occurred to persons employed in industries, forty-five to public service workers, and seventy-two to miners.

There were twenty-eight fewer fatalities in the state in February than during the previous month, when 243 were reported by State Bureau of Inspection.

A number of letters from soldiers sent to the MINER for publication during and after the war which have not been called for or claimed have been turned over to Guy McCoy of the county War History Commission and will be carefully preserved. The MIERN took great care to preserve all letters sent for publication, returning all those requested, and out of several hundred letters handled for publication, only one, through unforseen circumstances, was destroyed. The letters turned over to Mr. McCoy will not only be carefully preserved, but extracts of historical interest undoubtedly used in state archives of the war, and it would seem eminently fitting that these letters should remain in the hands of the historical authorities. However if interested persons desire the return of these letters they can be secured by calling on Guy McCoy. Several months ago the MINER published a complete list of the service men of the county who sacrificed their lives during the war. To date this is the only list of its kind in printed form and while a number of extra copies of the edition were sold at the time the value of this first printed list from a historical standpoint evidently was not realized. The MINER has on hand a limited number of these papers which can be procured by interested persons.

T. J. Harper of Bradford, local manager of the Bell Telephone Co., while in town recently explained very clearly to the MINER why the company is seeking to increase rates. The fact that the company is expected to maintain after the war service at pre-war rates makes the matter clear to every business man and all who are fair-minded should admit that in view of their experience in their own lines of endeavor such a course is well nigh impossible without great financial loss. The government could not operate the telephone lines at a profit when it was receiving 20 per cent more in rates than the owners are receiving now. It is hardly necessary to enumerate the great advances in prices of material, labor, etc., as it is obvious to the most casual observer that all such necessities to the successful operations of the lines have doubled in cost—and then doubled again in many details. In the opinion of this paper the telephone lines have most excellent reasons for asking the Public Service Commission to allow them to advance rates to a reasonable extent.

The space filler who draws good money for poor political prognostications from the Norther Tier in the Philadelphia North American seems bent upon playing his opposition to Senator F. E. Baldwin to the limit of lines. However, his efforts are not taken seriously in this Mr. Baldwin's district, and if the North American is willing to pay for that sort of tommyrot let the fellow make a little change. He may need it.

It may be fair game to ridicule W. J. Bryan and a whole lot of us are doing it, but among various things for which he should receive credit is the fact that he was one of the very first men in public life to discover that Woodrow Wilson was a "twenty-two calibre" president.

Hon. C. W. Catlin's popularity as a candidate for Member of Assembly is becoming more apparent every day. His fine record in the state legislative body and his ability and thorough fitness for the position will assure him of one of the largest votes ever tendered a legislative candidate at the Republican primaries.

Mary Pickford, deserted by her husband and whom she subsequently divorced, may leave the movies. Most of American male humanity has had a "crush" on Mary during her screen career, but her pictured perfection does not seem to extend to real life as her ex-husband, Owen Moore, seems rather pleased to be rid of her. Mary has announced that she has no intention of marrying again, but, of course you never can tell what may happen.

While the issue will be bitterly fought there is reason to believe that the platforms which the Republican and Democratic forces will present to the voters after the national conventions will each contain "wet" planks. Many of the young men who were overseas when the prohibition movement was at its height claim that injustice was done that they were allowed no voice in this matter; furthermore cellars are commencing to go dry which adds other supporters to a wet movement. There is but little doubt that whiskey and kindred liquors are banished from the United States never legally to return, but there seems to be a growing sentiment in favor of the making and sale of 4 per cent beer and light wines. Dispatches from Washington this week indicate that members of Congress are overwhelmed with protests against the bone-dry movement and the Volstead enforcement act is condemned in no unmeasured tones as a direct blow at the liberty of individual in his pursuit of happiness. As a matter of fact it has become such a prominent issue that leaders in both big political parties are bound to pause in their tactics of passing the buck and give it serious attention. That the introduction of such a plank will create great discord in both parties seems inevitable as the dry adherents will fight such a measure to the last ditch and have all the machinery ready and well greased for such a fight.

Following is one paragraph from a Washington correspondent which is about as comprehensive a statement concerning Wilson diplomacy as could be written:

President Wilson agreed to a treaty which would involve the United States in a league of nations in which Great Britain would have six votes to America's one, and which would have the power to limit armaments, bring economic pressure to bear upon various nations, place new interpretations on the Monroe doctrine or abrogate it entirely, make American domestic problems such as the tariff and immigration, subjects for league determination, and require the United States to furnish money, soldiers and other resources to guarantee the territorial integrity of practically all the other civilized nations of the globe. All this was what President Wilson alluded to as the "supreme sacrifice" which he wanted the United States to make, but which the British ambassador has declared the allies can not expect. President Wilson made supreme concessions from which the nation has been saved by patriotic and courageous Republican senators. So far as the credit of American diplomacy has been saved, it has been saved in the Senate and not in the White House.

Free seeds from the government may have their last distribution this year for all time. There will be no free seeds next year unless senators have a change of heart. The opportunity for saving $240,000 was too good to resist and the Senate agricultural committee struck the item out of the departments estimates. It is understood that the free seed for McKean county will be distributed through the public schools this year.

Last week in these columns the preposterous statement was made that Jack Johnson was champion fighter of the world. While our ignorance as to the identity of the world's champion pugilist may be commended in some quarters conscience compells us to admit that we know better— it was Jack Dempsey who was meant, of course. He is alleged to be a draft dodger, while the other Jack has been dodging a charge of white slavery for several years.

There is much food for thought on the part of Smethport people in a little paragraph published last week wherein C. S. King of Port Allegany stated that the monthly pay rolls of Port Allegany factories would aggregate $150,000 monthly. Smethport has everything Port Allegany has except the factories and resulting pay rolls. Why? is the question up to us to answer.

The apparent qualifications of Mellville Gillett of Smethport as a candidate for delegate to the Republican National Convention are being broadly recognized by the press throughout the district. Mr. Gillett's popularity in business and military circles, together with his nation-wide acquaintance with prominent Republicans, makes him a formidable candidate at this time. His many friends at home will be glad to know that his popularity in other sections of the district is increasing every day.

of the Interchurch World Movement

American mission boards are the only organizations which have developed a practical, comprehensive, inclusive program for solving the Mexican problem.

The Mexican problem is not a question of a revolution being squelched, but an evolution to be guided. Mission boards are planning to help Mexico solve her land problems by establishing agricultural schools; her social problems by setting up social centers in every town of over 15,000 population; her educational problems by establishing a university in Mexico City and enlarging and multiplying high schools, normal and day schools. A brotherly hand must be lent to aid the Mexican people in eliminating their 70 per cent. of illiteracy.

TARZAN AND THE Jewels of Opar

By EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

Author of "Tarzan of the Apes" "Son of Tarzan"

Copyright, 1918, by A. C. McClurg & Co.

She saw the carnivore step upon the corpse, stumblingly, as the grisly thing swung between its forepaws, and her eyes remained fixed in fascination while the beast passed within a few paces of her.

The interference of the body seemed to enrage the lion. He shook the inanimate clay venomously. He growled and roared hideously at the dead, insensate thing, and then he dropped it and raised his head to look about in search of some living victim upon which to wreak his ill temper. His yellow eyes fastened themselves balefully upon the figure of the girl, the bristling lips raised, disclosing the grinning fangs. A terrific roar broke from the savage throat, and the great beast crouched to spring upon this new and helpless victim.

Quiet had fallen upon the camp where Tarzan and Werper lay securely bound. Silently and powerfully the ape-man strained at the bonds which fettered his wrists.

The muscles knotted beneath the smooth brown skin of his arms and shoulders, the veins stood out upon his temples from the force of his exertions—a strand parted, another and another, and one hand was free. Then from the jungle came a low guttural, and the ape-man became suddenly a silent, rigid statue, with ears and nostrils straining to span the black void where his eyesight could not reach.

Again came the uncanny sound from the thick verdure beyond the camp. The sentries drew close together, watching the black spot from which the voice seemed to come.

They dared not approach. Their terror even prevented them from arousing their fellows—they could only stand in frozen fear and watch for the fearsome apparition they momentarily expected to see leap from the jungle.

Nor had they long to wait. A dim bulky form dropped lightly from the branches of a tree into the camp. At sight of it one of the sentries recovered command of his muscles and his voice. Screaming loudly, to awaken the sleeping camp, he leaped toward the flickering watch fire and threw a mass of brush upon it.

The flames leaped high upon the rejuvenated fire, lighting the entire camp, and the awakened men shrank back in superstitious terror from the sight that met their frightened and astonished vision.

A dozen huge and hairy forms loomed large beneath the trees at the far side of the inclosure. The white giant, one hand free, had struggled to his knees and was calling to the frightful nocturnal visitors in a hideous medley of bestial gutturals, barkings and growlings.

Growling, the great apes leaped forward toward Tarzan and Werper. Chulk led them. The Belgian officer called to his men to fire upon the intruders; but the negroes held back filled as they were with superstitious terror of the hairy tree-men, and with the conviction that the white giant who could thus summon the beasts of the jungle to his aid was more that human.

Drawing his own weapon the officer fired, and Tarzan, fearing the effect of the noise upon his really timid friends, called to them to hasten and fulfill his commands. Chulk and a half dozen others waddled rapidly forward, and, following the ape-man's directions, seized both him and Werper and bore them off toward the jungle.

By dint of threats, reproaches and profanity the Belgian officer succeeded in persuading his trembling command to fire a volley after the retreating apes. A ragged, straggling volley it was, but at least one of its bullets found a mark, for as the jungle closed about the hairy rescuers Chulk, who bore Werper across one broad shoulder, staggered and fell.

"My God, Lord Greystoke!" He Managed to Scream.

As Chulk went down he dropped Werper, so that the latter fell face downward with the body of the ape lying half across him. In this position the Belgian felt something resting against his hands, which were still bound at his back—something that was not a part of the hairy body of the ape.

Mechanically the man's fingers felt of the object resting almost in their grasp—it was a soft pouch, filled with small, hard particles. Werper gasped in wonderment as recognition filtered through the incredulity of his mind. It was impossible, and yet—it was true!

Feverishly he strove to remove the pouch from the ape and transfer it to his own possession; but the restricted radius to which his bonds held his hands prevented this, though he did succeed in tucking the pouch with its precious contents inside the waistband of his trousers.

Tarzan, sitting at a short distance, was busy with the remaining knots of the cords which bound him. Presently he flung aside the last of them and rose to his feet. Approaching Werper he knelt beside him. For a moment he examined the ape.

"Quite dead," he announced. "It is too bad—he was a splendid creature," and then he turned to the work of liberating the Belgian.

He freed his hands first and then commenced upon the knots at his ankles.

"I can do the rest," said the Belgian. "I have a small pocket knife which they overlooked when they searched me," and in this way he succeeded in ridding himself of the ape-man's attentions that he might find and open his little knife and cut the thong which fastened the pouch about Chulk's shoulder and transfer it from his waistband to the breast of his shirt. Then he rose and approached Tarzan.

"Now," said the ape-man, "keep your promise to me. Lead me to the spot where you last saw my wife."

It was slow work pushing through the jungle in the dead of night behind the slow-moving Belgian. The ape-man chafed at the delay, but the European could not swing through the trees as could his more agile and muscular companions, and so the speed of all was limited to that of the slowest.

The two had gone but a short distance when the roaring of distant lions fell upon their ears. The ape-man paid no attention to the familiar sounds until the crack of a rifle came faintly from the same direction, and when this was followed by the shrill neighing of horses and an almost continuous fusillade of shots intermingled with increased and savage roaring of a large troop of lions, he became immediately concerned.

"Someone is having trouble over there," he said, turning toward Werper. "I'll have to go to them—they may be friends."

"Your wife might be among them," suggested the Belgian, for since he had again come into possession of the pouch he had become fearful and suspicious of the ape-man, and in his mind had constantly revolved many plans for eluding this giant Englishman, who was at once his savior and his captor.

At the suggestion Tarzan started as though struck with a whip.

"God!" he cried, "she might be, and the lions are attacking them—they are in the camp. I can tell from the screams of the horses—and there! that was the cry of a man in his death agonies. Stay here, man—I will come back for you. I must go first to them," and swinging into a tree the lithe figure swung rapidly off into the night with the speed and silence of a disembodied spirit.

For a moment Werper stood where the ape-man had left him. Then a cunning smile crossed his lips. "Stay here?" he asked himself. "Stay here and wait until you return to find and take these jewels from me? Not I my friend, not I," and turning abruptly eastward Albert Werper passed through the foliage of a hanging vine and out of the sight of his fellowman—forever.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Home.

As Tarzan of the Apes hurtled through the trees the discordant sounds of the battle between the Abyssinians and the lions smote more and more distinctly upon his sensitive ears, redoubling his assurance that the plight of the human element of the conflict was critical indeed.

At last the glare of the camp fire shone plainly through the intervening trees, and a moment later the giant figure of the ape-man paused upon an overhanging bough to look down upon the bloody scene of carnage below.

His quick eye took in the whole scene with a single comprehending glance and stopped upon the figure of a woman standing facing a great lion across the carcass of a horse.

The carnivore was crouching to spring as Tarzan discovered the tragic tableau. Numa was almost beneath the branch upon which the ape-man stood, naked and unarmed. There was not even an instant's hesitation upon the part of the latter—it was as though he had not even paused in his swift progress through the trees, as lightning-like his survey and comprehension of the scene below him—so instantaneous his consequent action.

Like went Jane Clayton's eyes in holding and incredulity as she beheld this seeming apparition risen from the dead. The lion was forgotten—her own peril—everything save the wonderous miracle of this strange recrudescence.

Hurtling Against the Leaping Beast Like a Huge Animated Battering Ram.

She saw the sinewy form leap to the shoulder of the lion, hurtling against the leaping beast like a huge, animate battering ram. She saw the carnivore brushed aside as he was almost upon her, and in the instant she realized that no substanceless wraith could thus turn the charge of a maddened lion with brute force greater than the brute's.

Tarzan, her Tarzan, lived! A cry of unspeakable gladness broke from her lips, only to die in terror as she saw the utter defenseless of her mate and realized that the lion had recovered himself and was turning upon Tarzan in mad lust for vengeance.

At the ape-man's feet lay the discarded rifle of the dead Abyssinian whose mutilated corpse sprawled where Numa had abandoned it. The quick glance which had swept the ground for some weapon of defense discovered it, and as the lion reared upon his hind legs to seize the rash man-thing who had dared interpose its puny strength between Numa and his prey, the heavy stock whirred through the air and splintered upon the broad forehead.

Not as an ordinary mortal might strike a blow did Tarzan of the Apes strike, but with the maddened frenzy of a wild beast backed by the steel thews which his wild, arboreal boyhood had bequeathed him. When the blow ended the splintered stock was driven through the splintered skull into the savage brain, and the heavy iron barrel was bent into a rude V.

In the instant that the lion sank lifeless to the ground Jane Clayton threw herself into the eager arms of her husband. For a brief instant he strained her dear form to his breast and then a glance about him awakened the ape-man to the dangers which still surrounded them.

The blacks who had witnessed his advent looked on in amazement as they saw the naked giant leap easily into the branches of the tree from whence he had dropped so uncannily upon the scene and vanish as he had come, bearing away their prisoner with him.

Unmolested, Tarzan passed from the camp of the Abyssinians, from which the din of conflict followed him deep into the jungle until distance gradually obliterated it entirely.

Back to the spot where he had left Werper went the ape-man, joy in his heart now, where fear and sorrow had so recently reigned, and in his mind a determination to forgive the Belgian and aid him in making good his escape. But when he came to the place Werper was gone, and though Tarzan called aloud many times he received no reply. Convinced that the man had purposely eluded him for reasons of his own, John Clayton felt that he was under no obligations to expose his wife to further danger and discomfort in the prosecution of a more thorough search for the missing Belgian.

"He has acknowledged his guilt by his flight, Jane," he said. "We will let him go to lie in the bed that he has made for himself."

Straight as homing pigeons the two made their way toward the ruin and desolation that had once been the center of their happy lives, and which was soon to be restored by the willing black hands of laughing laborers made happy again by the return of the master and mistress whom they had mourned as dead.

Past the village of Achmet Zek their way led them, and there they found, but the charred remains of the palisade and the native huts, still smoking, as mute evidence of the wrath and vengeance of a powerful enemy.

"The Waziri," commented Tarzan with a grim smile.

"God bless them!" cried Jane Clayton.

"They cannot be far ahead of us," said Tarzan. "Basuli and the others. The gold is gone and the jewels of Opar, Jane; but we have each other, and the Waziri—we have love and loyalty and friendship. And what are gold and jewels to those?"

"If only poor Mugambi lived," she replied, "and those other brave fellows who perished their lives in vain endeavor to protect me!"

In the midst of mingled joy and sorrow the hours sped along through the familiar jungle, and as the afternoon was waning there came faintly to the ears of the ape-man the murmuring cadence of distant voices.

"We are nearing the Waziri, Jane," he said. "I can hear them ahead of us. They are going into camp for the night, I imagine."

A half hour later the two came upon a horde of ebon warriors which Basuli had collected for his war of vengeance upon the raiders. With them were the captured women of the tribe whom they had found in the village of Achmet Zek, and tall, even among the giant Waziri, loomed a familiar black form at the side of Basuli. It was Mugambi, whom Jane had thought dead amidst the charred ruins of the bungalow.

Ah, such a reunion! Long into the night the dancing and singing and laughter awoke the echoes of the somber wood. Again and again were the stories of their various adventures retold. Again and once again they fought their battles with savage beast and savage man, and dawn was already breaking when Basuli, for the fortieth time, narrated how he and a handful of warriors had watched the battle for the golden ingots which the Abyssinians of Abdul Mourak had waged against the Arab raiders of Achmet Zek, and how, when the victors had ridden away, they had sneaked out of the river reeds and stolen away with the precious ingots to hide them where no robber eye ever could discover them.

Pieced out from the fragments of their various experiences with the Belgian the truth concerning the malign activities of Albert Werper became apparent. Only Lady Greystoke found aught to praise in the conduct of the man, and it was difficult even for her to reconcile his many heinous acts with this one evidence of chivalry and honor.

"Deep in the soul of every man," said Tarzan, "must lurk the germ of righteousness. It was your own virtue, Jane, rather even than your helplessness, which awakened for an instant the latent decency of this degraded man. In that one act he retrieved himself, and when he is called to face his Maker may it outweigh in the balance all the sins he has committed."

* * * * * * *

Months had passed. The labor of the Waziri and the gold of Opar had rebuilt and refurnished the wasted homestead of the Greystokes. Once more the simple life of the great African farm went on as it had before the coming of the Belgian and the Arab. Forgotten were the sorrows and dangers of yesterday.

For the first time in months Lord Greystoke felt that he might indulge in a holiday, and so a great hunt was organized that the faithful laborers might feast in celebration of the completion of their work.

In itself the hunt was a success, and ten days after its inauguration a well laden safari took up its return march toward the Waziri plain. Lord and Lady Greystoke with Basuli and Mugambi rode together at the head of the column, laughing and talking together in that easy familiarity which common interests and mutual respect breed between honest and intelligent men of any races.

Jane Clayton's horse shied suddenly at an object half hidden in the long grasses of an open space in the jungle. Tarzan's keen eyes sought quickly for an explanation of the animal's action.

"What have we here?" he cried swinging from his saddle, and a moment later the four were grouped about a human skull and a little litter of whitened human bones.

Tarzan stooped and lifted a leathern pouch from the grisly relics of a man. The hard outlines of the contents brought an exclamation of surprise to his lips.

"The jewels of Opar," he cried holding the pouch aloft, "and," pointing to the bones at his feet, "all that remains of Werper, the Belgian."

Mugambi laughed. "Look within Bwana," he cried, "and you will see what are the jewels of Opar—you will see what the Belgian gave his life for," and the black laughed aloud.

"Why do you laugh?" asked Tarzan.

"Because," replied Mugambi, "I filled the Belgian's pouch with river gravel before I escaped the camp of the Abyssinians whose prisoners we were. I left the Belgian only worthless stones, while I brought away with me the jewels he had stolen from you. That they were afterward stolen from me while I slept in the jungle is my shame and my disgrace; but at least the Belgian lost them—open his pouch and you will see."

Tarzan untied the thong which held the mouth of the leathern bag closed, and permitted the contents to trickle slowly forth into his open palm. Mugambi's eyes went wide at the sight, and the others uttered exclamations of surprise and incredulity, for from the rusty and weatherworn pouch ran a stream of brilliant, scintillating gems.

"The jewels of Opar!" cried Tarzan. "But how did Werper come by them again?"

None could answer, for both Chulk and Werper were dead, and no other knew.

"Poor devil!" said the ape-man as he swung back into his saddle. "Even in death he has made restitution—let his sins lie with his bones."

[THE END.]

SAVINGS SOCIETIES BENEFIT ALL WORKERS

Reduce Labor Turnover and Stimulate Production.

How does the savings society benefit the employer? How does it benefit the employe? How does it benefit the United States? Employers have discovered that a savings society reduces the labor turnover, stimulates production and makes for better efficiency among the workers. The employes gain an honest appreciation of financial freedom and independence, insure themselves and their families for a rainy day, and tie themselves to a steady job. A savings society makes for American citizenship. A man who invests in the securities of a government takes greater interest in that government and is more ready to uphold it and its institutions. He becomes more closely attached to it, and if he is not a citizen, he will aim to become one. Excerpts of letters from business men prove these points.

"Now that the payments on Liberty Bonds are winding up, we look for even more savers among our employes in 1920 than in the past year. We have made a study of your Thrift plan and will push it through," writes L. J. Woodward, President of Fitzgibbon & Crisp, Inc., Trenton, N. J., to W. J. King, Chairman of Government Savings Societies, Third Federal Reserve District.

Regular group saving in industrial plants is good business from the standpoint of both employes and employers. In his report of January 16, 1920, President Woodward continues: "You may be interested in the success of the Government Savings Society installed in our plant by your Mr. Hopkinson, December, 1919.

"The educational work of the thrift plan as outlined in the 'Get the Habit' letters which we put out in the pay envelopes of our 300 employes, proved the stepping stone for weekly savings by means of Thrift and Savings Stamps. The savings averaged $200.00 a week.

"We continue to keep up the interest by using the pay envelope 'Work and Save' inserts, etc., and believe that the results already attained justify the encouragement of the plan as good business from the employer's standpoint.

"Our experience has been that the majority of employes now desire to work harder so that they may earn more in order to save and invest in Government Stamps, where their money is safe and secure against loss or depreciation. All this helps greatly to increase production."

That the instalment of these societies into the various business places helps the workers to save regularly and more easily, tends to stabilize labor and makes for better citizenship, the following excerpt of a letter from H. S. Taylor, Secretary of the Savings Society of the New York Ship Building Corporation, is concrete evidence:

"In our Lumber Shop, the labor turn-over was almost 100 per cent every two weeks. The War Savings Society secretary for that department, which, by the way, was made up entirely of colored people, paid little or no attention to them, because it was impossible to do anything in the line of stamp saving. His girl friend happened to be secretary of another department showing very good results. To compete with her, he insisted that all the colored men in his shop become savers. For a period of months there has been almost no change in the working force of his shop as a result of his efforts.

Promotes Citizenship.

"In the plate and angle shop, a department of about 500 men, having many foreigners, a canvas was made to find out men desiring citizenship papers. Of all those who wished first papers, every one was saving money buying War Savings Stamps, while everyone who refused was not buying them."

Seventy-one out of eighty employes at Alvah Bushnell Company, Philadelphia, saved and invested in Government Savings Stamps the sum of $836.00 in 1919. And for the month of January, 1920, the same number saved in stamps $323.00. Most of these having paid off their Liberty Bonds, turned to the Stamps. They have the habit of systematic saving and safe investment.

"The 'Get the Habit' letter has helped us to increase the membership in our Savings Society over 150 per cent. We now have over 90 per cent membership. Our savings for the month of January show an increase of 125 per cent over the best month of last year. This is gratifying to me, and I attribute a considerable amount of this success to the timely work of our organization," writes Mr. Thomas William Dicker, Jr., Secretary of the Savings Society at the Alvah Bushnell Co., to the Savings Division Quarters.

"The labor turn-over is greatly reduced when the employes are saving rather than spending in advance the wages of the coming week or two. The employe who saves has an honest appreciation of freedom and independence, and is not always complaining and agitating others on account of money spent before it is earned, neither does he jump from job to job. The employe who has a fund to rely on in case of illness and the unexpected is economical, secure, and has a contented state of mind."

McKEAN COUNTY MINER

Thursday, March 11, 1920.

—Its coming—fast. The Bucktail Minstrel show, April 8.

—Mrs. J. A. Lindholm was a Bradford visitor this week.

—Miss Edna Hellman was a visitor in Olean Thursday.

—Attorney T. F. Mullin of Eldred was in town Monday.

—Gerald Sloan of Bradford was a visitor in Smethport Monday.

—Mahlon Cryle Brundage and Hazel Ruth White were married in Port Allegany Thursday of last week.

—Mr. and Mrs. Orlo J. Hamlin will leave Saturday for a visit at Bogalusa, Louisiana.

—Mrs. George Fitzsimons of Conneaut, Ohio, was a guest of her daughter, Mrs. Henry McGavisk last week.

—The death of Mrs. Kate Chesnut of Wrights occurred at her home Thursday evening of last week. She was 81 years of age. She leaves her husband and eight children.

—Leonard McGavisk, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry McGavisk, was painfully scalded while at his work in the East Smethport chemical works last Wednesday, and was attended by Dr. Robt. Hamilton. The young man is recovering from his injuries.

—Searching the pockets has been the source of much trouble; but now it pays to look for a card as advertised by Monheimer in today's MINER

—The Mt. Jewett-Smethport high school basketball game at Mt. Jewett Wednesday night of last week, was awarded to Mt. Jewett by the referee on forfeit. Score 2 to 0.

—A. J. Nordstrum of Port Allegany who was in town Saturday to attend the 'sheep raisers' banquet at the Grand Central, was a pleasant caller at this office.

—Charles G. Messler of Kane was in town Monday. He is a former Smethport resident and informed the MINER that he was again in the furniture business after being out of it for the past three years.

—It is understood that G. A. Downing and Sons will soon move their barber shop to the store room in the Central block which is fitted for barber shop purposes.

—Norman Knapp of Sartwell while cleaning out a spring on the John Bissell farm last week unearthed 168 frogs that were hibernating for the winter. In publishing the foregoing item the Eldred Eagle calls attention to the fact that because of the refuse from chemical plants in the streams frogs have become almost extinct in the river and small streams in this part of the county.

—The school house at Derrick City was burned Saturday. Loss $15,000; insurance $5,000. About ninety pupils attended this school requiring the services of three teachers. School is now being held in the Odd Fellows' building in that town.

—Members of the Fire Department have been notified that a fire drill will be held at the hose house tonight, March 11, at 7:30 o'clock. Instructions in the use of the chemical wagons will be given.

—At the Lyceum Friday night the Smethport and Portville high school teams will meet in basketball battle. Smethport has not lost a game on the home floor this season and will fight hard to keep up that record. A good attendance is desired as the games are not receiving the patronage they should.

—Ideal Rebekah Lodge, No. 63, I. O. O. F. most earnestly requests all Past Noble Grands to be in attendance at their next regular meeting Monday evening, March 15, as there is important business to transact. After the business meeting the lodge will held a dance for itsmembers and their friends.

Mrs. Jessie Hunt, the Bradford woman who attempted to kill herself on January 25 by crawling into the firebox under a boiler at the Kendall refinery, died at the Bradford Hospital Monday morning, as a result of burns sustained. She leaves three little children. Her father, William Dunbar lives in Salamanca, N. Y.

—Last Thursday night at the Lyceum the Gobs and the Doughboys of Bucktail Post clashed in their second basketball contest of the season and the Gobs were victorious upon this occasion. Each team has a game to its credit and the next one should attract the largest crowd of the season.

Dr. G. E. Benninghoff, Bradford's well known surgeon, underwent an operation for the removal of gall stones Tuesday morning at the Bradford hospital. His condition is considered satisfactory following the ordeal, which will be good news to his many friends in Bradford and elsewhere. The surgical work was performed by Dr. W. C. Hogan, brother-in-law of Dr. Benninghoff.—Bradford Star Record.

Ridgway Record: Herb Moran of Coudersport, the former National League baseball player, is in Ridgway today and attended a conference of the Elk County Baseball Association at the office of B. B. Kline this afternoon. Moran started with the old Du Bois team of the Interstate League, and afterward played with Boston, Cincinnati and Brooklyn. Last year he managed the Sioux City team. It is intimated that Moran will be manager of the new Elk county team.

—Eldred and Franklinville have been having some red hot basketball games during the past few weeks. Franklinville has enlisted the service of that big guy Henderson of Olean, who is notorious in basketball affairs throughout this part of the country. A recent game in Franklinville was featured by several fist fights and Franklinville got the decision. However in Eldred last Saturday night the Spartans came back strong and defeated the York state outfit, Henderson and all, by a score of 57 to 21

A REDFERN SPORT COAT

All the snap, all the charm and sprightliness of youth are expressed in Redfern sport Coats. The springtime of the year, and the springtime of life are in the bright colors, the wonderful fabrics, and most of all, in the lines of the garment itself.

Narrow, sloping shoulders, long tuxedo reverses, pockets that are out of the ordinary in size and cut, narrow leather belts, or self belts and buckles—are just a few of the many individual touches that denote the hand of the master designer.

PRICES $25.50 TO $38.50
SPRING SUITS, $37.50 TO $52.50

—Men will be interested in the important announcement in H. W. Rubin & Son advertisement today. Get your spring suit made to measure at reasonable cost.

—The Misses Mabel and Verna Ross spent the week end with friends in Mt. Jewett.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lyne and daughter, Evelyn, who had been making their home in Pittsburgh for the past few months returned to Smethport Friday where they will now reside.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fay spent the week end in Olean with relatives.

Donald Nichols, who has been confined to his home for two weeks by illness is improving.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Backus returned Friday evening from a few days' stay in Buffalo, N. Y.

Mrs. D. D. Comes of Marvin Creek was a visitor in town Tuesday.

T. F. Mullin of Eldred was a Smethport business visitor yesterday.

—Mrs. Claude Heinlein and daughter, Jane, of Kane are spending some time with Mr. Heinlein in this place.

—Miss Mary McCarthy returned Tuesday from a short visit with Miss Margherite Molholland at Hazelhurst.

—A lot of wood has been hauled through Eldred during the past few weeks. At the railroad station are hundreds of cords of chemical wood piled waiting for cars to take it away. At Prouty's handle factory are huge piles of hard wood to be turned into their well known products and orders are now on their files for more products than even their large supply of wood will make. At the last block factory several hundred thousand feet of logs have been piled ready to be turned. One teamster, commenting on the good run of sleighing and the ability to haul big loads, stated that in the past few weeks he had made $500 with his team.—Eldred Eagle.

Luke Rielly Says, "The Rat Died Before Reaching the River."

"Since moving near the river 2 years ago, we've always used RAT-SNAP. Watched a vicious water rat, nibbling at RAT-SNAP outside the house. About 15 minutes later he darted off for the water, to cool his burning stomach, but he died before reaching it." Three sizes, 35c, 65c, $1.20. Sold and guaranteed by Neal holm's Grocery, Garlick's Hardware and the Hogarth Pharmacy.

LOAFING DOLLARS

A loafing dollar—lying idle in your pocket or in a hidden corner—is of just as little use to you or to the community as a loafing man is to his employer or to society.

Your dollars in the bank serve you and also serve society—is helping turn the wheels of industries—to drive great ships to the ends of the earth—to build—and plow—and dig.

Let us put your dollars to work for you.

Pennsylvania must pay its own way!

IN any well managed business, if a branch is losing money, one of two things must be done—

Make adjustments so that the department will be self-supporting, or

Close up that end of the business.

Bell telephone operations in Pennsylvania are yielding no profits.

Certain units of the Bell System in other states have been granted increases in rates which make it possible for them to meet their expenses.

Today, Pennsylvania is not in that class and we in Pennsylvania cannot ask other states to shoulder our responsibilities. We must face our own problems.

In Pennsylvania right now, we are not making ends meet.

We have our own bills, our own payrolls, our own dividends to pay. We can't ask other states to pay them.

We must have increased rates in Pennsylvania or the service cannot be kept up.

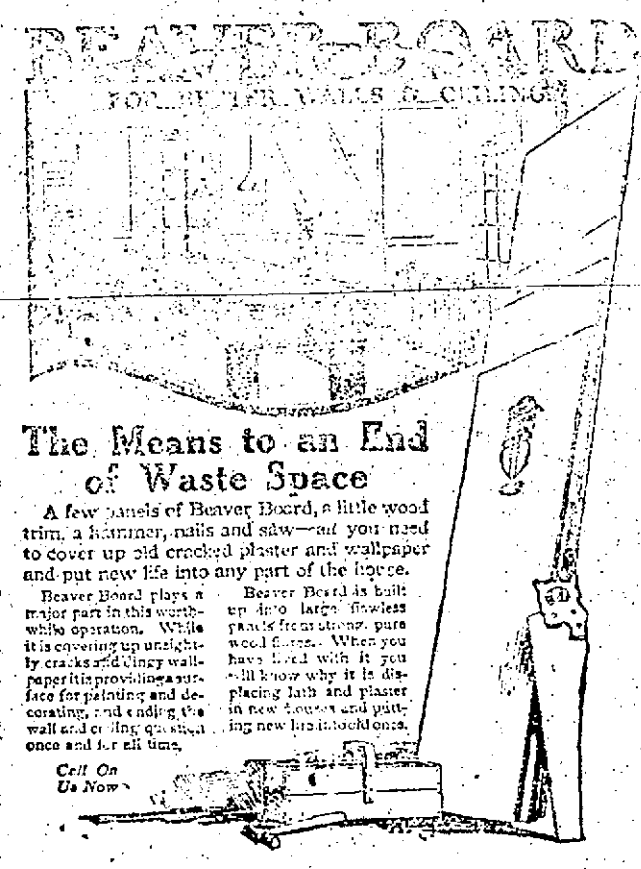
BEAVER BOARD
FOR INTERIOR WALLS & CEILINGS



The Means to an End of Waste Space

A few panels of Beaver Board, a little wood trim, a hammer, nails and saw—all you need to cover up old cracked plaster and wallpaper and put new life into any part of the house.

Beaver Board plays a major part in this worthwhile operation. While it is covering up unsightly cracks and dingy wallpaper it is providing a surface for painting and decorating, and ending the wall and ceiling question once and for all time.

Beaver Board is built up into large flawless panels from strong, pure wood fibre. When you have lived with it you will know why it is displacing lath and plaster in new houses and putting new life into old ones.
